SINCE it is the expressed wish of some of the cousins that an attempt be made to sketch the origin and history of our Salisbury Reunion Association—noting briefly some of the circumstances which have made these yearly meetings occasions so pleasant and interesting to us all, we turn to the early records and newspaper clippings and quote freely from them.

From early days, it would seem that the different ones of the Nathaniel Salisbury family observed the ancient and honorable custom of "going visiting," and when the heavy farm work was completed in the fall a trip among the kinsfolk was the order of the day.

On a certain funeral occasion when many of the relatives were together, Cousin Eliza Knights is remembered to have said, "It is too bad we can't all get together under happier circumstances." Sometimes there were informal gatherings when the relatives were visiting from the west, and once, July 18, 1896, a number of the relatives met at the old Dairy Hill farm as related by Cousin Jackson Smith at the 1921 reunion 25 years later. Aunt Loretta Salisbury was then living and was able to be present.

Nothing had been done in the way of regular meetings, however, except that the children of Ackland Salisbury had always observed his birthday in June by going to Norway as near that date as possible and decorating his grave in the cemetery there.

In 1903, Emma Salisbury Spencer, "in friendly conversation with Mrs. Adra Ives Douglass of the Jason Ives family, decided it would be delightful to come together to these historic and beautiful hills to do honor to their ancestors who once formed a part of the life and activities of old Norway. The two families were always friends, so why should they not join in this sacred offering of love and duty to the dear ones gone? Later others of the Salisbury descendants wished to be included, consequently much writing, talking and planning followed, and on the morning of June 26th people were seen coming from every direction and converging toward Norway on her several hills.

After dinner an impromptu program of toasts and anecdotes was given, Mr. Elmer Ives representing the Ives family—some members of which have always been with us as welcome guests."

Afterward it was decided to become a permanent Association with yearly meetings at Norway, and I may add that we have held a meeting each year since then and always in the Baptist Church, where Great-Grandfather worshiped in his day.

At this first meeting the suggestion was made that an original hymn be prepared and sung at all future reunions. This being done by Emma Salisbury Spencer and set to the grand old tune, Duke Street, it was sung for the first time at the 1904 reunion with Miles Moore leading the singing. Consisting of seven stanzas, it well epitomizes the tenderest thoughts and ideals of the writer for our meeting days and should always be sung in its completeness, never spoiled by abbreviation. Music has always contributed its share to the pleasure of the day. Oh, the dear ones who have lent their voices in song—some of them are still with us, while many have gone to "sing on that beautiful shore the melodious songs of the blest!" Cousin Miles Moore, how his voice used to ring out in the beautiful hymns—Cousin Anna B. Carley and Mrs. Hattie Forrest—the "Russia Glee Club"—the Knights family—Stanley Smith and many others we might mention.

The second gathering was held on Labor Day, that date being set to accommodate Marie Candace Perry, a daughter of Ackland Salisbury, who, with her husband, made her first visit to the old home at Norway in thirty-four years. Another year it was held August 24, 1912, to allow Frank B. Moore of Kansas City to meet with us. With these two exceptions, we have always come together the latter part of June—when, if ever, come perfect days—and most of these days might indeed be characterized as "a perfect day".

The third reunion, that of 1905, was made notable by the attendance of Mrs. Eliza Salisbury Ferris, the last surviving child of Nathaniel Salisbury, who lived to the remarkable age of ninety-seven years, and on that occasion the youngest descendant at that time was also present—being Manzie Katherine Talcott, a beautiful babe of six months.

One year Mrs. Harriet Babbitt Malcom—last of Aunt Betsey's daughters—attended with her daughter, Mrs. Helen M. Wampfler of Carthage. On only a very few occasions has anyone by the name of Salisbury been present, but S. O. Salisbury, wife and daughter and Dr. A. Salisbury have met with us. The attendance has usually been very good, sometimes reaching seventy-five, and only once has it fallen below forty, usually being between fifty and sixty.

At the early reunions it was the custom for each family to be accompanied by a large box, basket or hamper of provisions for the dinner—being the product of the previous day's labor on the part of the feminine cousins—but after a time the ladies of Norway were prevailed upon to undertake the task of supplying this important feature of the day's program—and to their cheerful and hearty co-operation in the commissary department is due no small share of the success of our gatherings.

SALISBURY GENEALOGY

By the year 1905 the genealogy compiled by A. T. Smith, Emma S. Spencer and their committee had been issued, giving the names of 216 living descendants. Later it was thought best to bring this work down to date as far as possible, as well as inquire into the earlier history of our ancestry, and the former work was made the basis of the present volume. On this, C. E. Morey of Utica and O. C. West of Syracuse (the latter a member of the Calvin Salisbury family, who has become interested in attending our reunions) have given a large amount of time, co-operating with the committee in charge.

Chief among the features of the day in each case has been, of course, the pleasant association, the friendly chaffing, the time-worn jokes—in some cases just the warm handclasp and word of tender sympathy—all the things that make up the intercourse with dearly loved kindred and friends. "Surely it is good to feel that here are our own—bound by ties of birth, marriage or friendship of long years,—and the heart warms to everyone in a tender, inexpressible way that moves us all, though we cannot describe it in words. It is just this which makes us all feel that we cannot miss a single one of these gatherings. Oh, but it is worth while to take the long journey to meet so many of your own, "to see welcome and love and tenderness shine on the faces, gleam from the eyes and give a thrill to the tones."

(SECRETARY'S REPORT, read July 6, 1910)

"After the business meeting closed, the company went, as is their custom, to the cemetery where are the graves of so many of the family. It is not an idle ceremony that brings us each year to this quiet sleeping place of our dear ones—but a sacred privilege—not only to scatter the fading flowers above them, but to offer the tender thoughts their lives and early training have awakened in us and to renew once again our unspoken, but not the less hearty, vow that our lives shall be better and truer and more unselfish for this quiet, sacred time spent beside their unconscious dust; and a great wish grows in us to be as tenderly cherished by those we love, when we, too, pass to the other shore.

"Again we wend our several ways toward the different points of the compass where our homes lie, but we all feel that a new tie has grown into the bond that binds us one to another."

SALISBURY

This family, variously written: Salisbury, Salesbury, Salusbury, also Salesbury, is one of great antiquity. Playfair, the author, "deduces the family from Adam de Salisbury (Salzburg), a younger son of the Duke of Bavaria, who came into Wales and was Captain of the garrison of Denoigh, where he became possessed of lands there".

Mr. Robert Salisbury, afterward Sir Robert, is referred to as having said:—"My own family came over with William the Conqueror. Adam de Saltzburg, who attended him, was a younger son of the house of Bavaria and took the name of the town he then lived in, the present seat of the Archbishop of Saltzburg. Upon their residence in England the family 'Anglified' this name into Salusbury, Salesbury and Salisbury. As soon as the Conqueror's descendants got a sufficient footing in Wales, my ancestors had a grant of the Lordship of Llewenny in the County of Denbigh, and were governors at Denbeigh Castle for many generations. They were the first Sheriffs and first members of Parliament for the County of Denbigh."

The late Rev. Sir Charles J. Salisbury, Bart., of Llewenny, Wales, says:—"The oldest line of the family adhered to the names as Salusbury, being so spelled on the Pillar of Barnet in Herts, erected as memorial of the bloody battle there fought between the Houses of York and Lancaster—the memorial has since been destroyed. The family were adherents of the House of Lancaster.

The ancestors of the line were reigning Dukes of Bavaria, 936 to 973, but dispossessed by the Emperor Otho (Otho the Great), after a long series of wars, as they fought valiantly for their crown. The individual who accompanied William the Conqueror into England was Adam de Salzburg, a younger son of the Bavarian line; his first grant of land was in Lancashire on the banks of the Ribble, where he built a fair house, now in ruins, called Salusbury Hall. They afterward migrated into Denbighshire and Flintshire, where they had large possessions.

This same gentleman is reported by Williams in his "Ancient and Modern Denbigh," to have affirmed that he found the arms of the family—the white lion, etc., with their Heraldic motto "Sat est prostrasse leoni", emblazoned over the gates of Salzburg.

Llewenny was the chief seat of the race for many centuries.

Mrs. Piozzi (Thrale), a Salisbury by birth, says in her "Autobiographical Memoirs":—"The Salusbury pedigree is perpetually referred to by Pennant in his numerous volumes. I showed an abstract of it to the heralds in the office at Saltzburg and they acknowledged me a true descendant of their house."

One Henry Salusbury, surnamed the Black, who having taken three noble Saracens with his own hand in the first Crusade, Coeur de Lion knighted him on the field of battle; and to the old Bavarian Lion which adorned his shield, added three Crescents for coat armor.

He built Llewenny Hall, naming it "Lew", the lion, and "au ny", for us, and set a brazen one upon its highest tower. Among our Cambrian ballads is one to the honor of this hero, still known to the harpers by the name of 'Black Sir Harry'.

SALISBURY GENEALOGY

In confirmation of the Germanic origin of the Salisburys, the author of "Ancient and Modern Denbigh" speaks of the personal traits of the family as follows:—It is very remarkable that, although the Salisburys have mixed with so many genuine noble and even princely Welshblood, the features and complexion, for the most part, preserve an unmistakable German cast. The females, in particular, are fair, blue eyed, stately and generally handsome, if not beautiful women; while the males are tall, straight, athletic, mostly sandy complexioned, fine looking men, with a dignified and somewhat haughty deportment, and high spirited and a rather irritable temperament, with a high and keen sense of honor.

From among those of the name who have specially distinguished themselves were two who lived in the sixteenth century and on in the seventeenth.

William Salisbury, great-grandson of Thomas of Llewenny, spent several years in academical learning. He wrote and published "A Dictionary in English and Welsh," in London in 1547; "Batterry of the Popes Batteraux," commonly called "The High Altar;" "The Laws of Howell Du'." He translated and first published in print "The Epistles and Gospels for the Whole Year" in King Edward the Fifth's time. He also published the "New Testament in Welsh" at the command of the Bishop of Wales in 1567. Queen Elizabeth granted to William Salisbury and John Wales, and to their assigns and heirs, a patent of seven years for printing the Bible and Common Prayer, &c.

An eminent rebel was Thomas Salisbury who took part in the Babington plot to murder her Majesty (Queen Elizabeth), to disinherit her of her kingdom, to stir up sedition and to subvert the true Christian religion, espousing the cause of Mary, Queen of Scots.

A loyal hero of the Salisbury family was Col. William, of Rug, of the sixth generation. He was intrusted with the command of the fortress of Denbigh by Charles I in 1646 at a time of special peril to the royal cause.

(The reference to Richard, Coeur de Lion, suggests the following passage from Scott's "Ivanhoe" as explanatory of the family motto:
"Thou dost ask thy life, Waldemar," said the King.

SALISBURY GENEALOGY

"He that is in the lion's clutch," answered Fitzuse, "knows it were needless."

"Take it then unasked," said Richard, "the lion preys not on prostrate carcasses." Chapter 40.)

Edward Salisbury and John Salisbury, younger sons of Sir Thomas Salisbury (No. 10 in line) of the Llanheider branch, emigrated to this country (America) on account of political differences in about 1640-45. The former settled at Cranston, R. I., where he died without issue. The latter, John Salisbury, settled at Swansea, Mass.

On account of "political differences" these two brothers came over to this country "incog" and mingled but little in political affairs.

WILLIAM SALISBURY, b. ¹⁶²², in Denbighshire, Wales; d. 1675, June 24. Married Susanna

He lived in Dorchester, Mass. (set off as town of Milton in 1662) in 1648. In the town records of Dorchester is found that the Selectmen of Dorchester appointed him herdsman to take care of the oxen and steers from the 9th of May to 28th of September, 1653.

He evidently had received a grant of land in Swansea and was prospecting for a habitation when the attack was made on Swansea by the Indians, and he and John were both killed. A tablet marks the spot where they fell.

On July 30th, 1679, the Selectmen of Dorchester voted to grant the widow Salisbury libertie to get 2,100 clapboards out of the common swamps; hence his widow either remained in Dorchester or returned there. The inventory of his estate taken Aug. 25, 1675, amounted to 154 pounds 19 shillings and his widow gave bond as administratrix Sept. 17, 1675 (Suffolk Probate, 5:270).

"Nov. 11, 1684, administration de bonis non—of William Salisbury, late of Milton decd. int., formerly under the adm. of Susanna his Relict also decd.—granted unto his eldest son, William Salisbury of Swansea." (Suffolk Probate, 6:215.)

May 27, 1685, William of Swansea, son and heir of William of Milton, sole administrator and Anna his wife, sold house and land in Milton to David Hencher for 80 pounds (Suffolk Deeds, 32:50).

May 7, 1677, Widow Salisbury was admitted to full communion in Dorchester Church, and July 1, 1677, her eight children were baptized. Sept. 18, 1681, she was dismissed to join church at Milton, newly formed, and Oct. 2, 1681, admitted there to full communion.

The town of Swansea revoked the grant of land to his father (William 1) on account of his not having settled upon it within a certain time, but the heirs, having shown good reason for not doing so, it was restored. He was a ship builder, and served as deputy and selectman for some years. He was also the moderator of town meetings and one of the committee to build the great bridge between Swansea and Barrington.

Richard Salisbury was born in Swansea (son of Daniel) and married Elizabeth Easterbrooks of the neighboring town of Warren, R. I. Of their children, the first four were born in Swansea and the others in Woodstock, Windham Co., Ct., where the family moved. Daniel, eldest son of Richard, married and settled in Providence, R. I., where he died in early life—the others came with their parents to Fairfield, Herkimer Co., N. Y., among the first settlers, some time previous to 1800. The old farm in the northern part of Fairfield is on what is called Lawton St. on the road to the Old City. It was known in later years as the Melvin Chase Farm.

SALISBURY GENEALOGY

The father grew old and his youngest son, Calvin, stayed with him. As there were still two families of them, they built a large house, put a kitchen on each end, and used the sitting room and parlor together. The father died at the age of 70, but the mother lived to the remarkable age of 95. The three maiden daughters lived there together, Anne dying in 1838 and Mary and Candace very close together in 1848.

In the possession of May Salisbury Waring of Inglewood, Cal., is the old Richard Salisbury family Bible, some old deeds and papers, and a piece of the wedding dress of Elizabeth Easterbrooks—of very fine white linen spun and woven by herself. Mrs. J. D. Henderson, late of Herkimer, N. Y., had the wedding slippers of either Elizabeth or her daughter Patty.

NATHANIEL SALISBURY, b. 1772, Mar. 24, at Swansea, Mass.; d. 1866, Apr. 6, at Norway. Married Joanna Wilson, 1796, Jan. 27, b. 1775, July 14, at Thompson, Ct., d. 1850, Mar. 3, at Norway, N. Y.

From the Norway Tidings of June, 1890, we take the following: "Nathaniel Salisbury, born Mar. 24, 1772, and his family, furnish material for the main part of this genealogy. He remained at home until seventeen years of age, and then served an apprenticeship with Richard Gay of four years at the carpenter's and joiner's trade. At the expiration of the four years he came April 1st, 1793, to Pittstown, N. Y., where he worked at his trade two years; from there he came to Fairfield in 1795. In 1796 he journeyed to Connecticut and married Joanna Wilson. They journeyed with an ox cart of household goods to their first home in Fairfield, nearly opposite the late residence of Washington Phillips. Here he had a small block house and an acre of land, where he lived for seven years, working at his trade. In 1803 he disposed of his Fairfield home and moved to Norway, first locating near the W. H. Morse farm. After a change or two in residence he "swapped places" with Shibmah Nichols for the farm he so long owned on Dairy Hill. This change occurred about 1806. He remained here until after 1840, when he sold to his son Ackland and located in Norway village. He was one of the first large dairymen in town, and was a thorough, successful farmer, after changing mechanical pursuits for agricultural.

Their family numbered ten children, one dying young and nine living to mature years. All except Loretta married. She remained at home, caring for the father until his death. The marriages all resulted in increasing the world's population and widening the pulsations of Salisbury blood. The children in many of the families were numerous, —probably few, if any, of Norway's old pioneers have as many living descendants as Nathaniel and Joanna Salisbury. They are widely scattered. At the Norway centennial this family had the largest representation. The Salisbury family were highly respectable, industrious and thrifty; their descendants in the main inherit the same qualities. A family trait is strong will power, 'set in their way,' decided in their convictions. With the exception of the son Ackland, who was a prominent Methodist, the rest of the family were Baptists in sentiment, and anti-masons and whigs in politics previous to the organization of the Republican party. Ackland Salisbury, born in 1803, was named by his father for Major Ackland, of the British Army during the Revolutionary War. He died in Springfield, Nebraska, March 15, 1865, having left Norway to live with his sons about a year previous to his death. For sixty years he had been a member of the Methodist Church and during much of that time held the position of trustee, steward, class leader and chorister. He was a sincere, consistent Christian of the old Methodist type. His house was the itinerants' home.

His children revere his memory and annually decorate his grave in the village cemetery. His oldest son, William A., enlisted in Company C of the famous old 34th N. Y. S. V. at the beginning of the Rebellion, and served his country most faithfully, until struck down by a Rebel bullet at the battle of Antietam. Bowen B. Moon, a brother-in-law, undertook the hazardous journey to bring the body home. His body rests in the family burial plot in our cemetery. He was nearly twenty-one years of age. The lettered marble truthfully calls him a Christian and a Patriot.

Joanna, wife of Nathaniel Salisbury, died in 1850, but he survived until 1866. At that time it was said of him: 'The death of the oldest person in town, and one who has been so long and favorably known, deserves more than a brief mention. Sixty-four years he had been a resident in Norway, and by patient toil, fixedness of purpose and temperate habits, he acquired a handsome property and reared a large and respected family. His early advantages were limited, but he possessed a vigorous mind, which by study and thought became stored with useful knowledge. During life's latter years he became deeply interested in scripture study and the history of the Holy Land he dwelt upon with delight. He was a kind husband and father, a good neighbor, an honest, useful citizen. His intellectual faculties were strong and clear to the end of life. His observations upon the events of his life were full of wisdom and understanding; his recollections of the stormy days of Revolutionary times were vivid, his narrations of the events of the 1812 War were accurate and interesting. He was born a subject of the British Crown, but saw the successful issue of the Revolutionary struggle and has also been permitted to witness the successful issue of the Civil War, and the preservation of our government against the assaults of traitors. He lived a consistent Christian and died in peace. He left living six children, thirty-eight grandchildren, fifty-four great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren, a total of one hundred and one descendants in number.'

OLD CLIPPING

Miss Matilda Loomis taught school in the Dairy Hill district, situated about two miles east of Norway village, during the summer of 1815; commencing May 23d, ending Sept. 30th. Her compensation was $1.25 per week and board, making the total expense to the district for the term $38.50. Miss Loomis was a sister of Judge Loomis of Little Falls; soon after this date she married Rev. Loring S. Williams and removed to Arkansas, and both were engaged for many years in missionary labors among the Cherokee and Choctaw Indians. Mrs. Williams died in Carlinville, Ill., in 1844; Mr. Williams is still living in his 80th year at Glenwood, Iowa. Both are well remembered by the old inhabitants of Norway and Salisbury. Miss Loomis was a lady of remarkable talent and piety, and her memory is held in great respect and esteem by her old pupils and acquaintances. Fortunately her "school roll" has been preserved and we are enabled to give a full list of the scholars that attended her school sixty-one years since. A few are still living in our county, but "Dead" would be written against the names of a large majority.

MARY, b. 1828, Jan. 14, at Fairfield, N. Y.; d. 1830, Sept. 16, at Fairfield, N. Y.

Calvin married Mary Pearce and was one of Fairfield's most honored citizens. He possessed a broad, sound mind, was a great reader, and well posted on the political and theological topics of his day. For many years he was a deacon in the Newport Baptist Church. E. C. Cowles, who married one of his descendants, says: "The moral and religious element was the predominant characteristic in the Salisbury family." It can plainly be seen that they were a family of more than ordinary intellectual and spiritual attainments.

Philena married Gile Johnson and pioneered with him in the then howling wilderness of Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., where their old homestead still stands near Dayton. Her second son was a doctor, and the family has been and is still noted for its successful physicians. Her grandson writes: "She was a remarkable woman, bookish and high-minded."

Earl was a Baptist minister for some years, but his health failing, he took up farming north of Syracuse in the town of Cicero, where his father lived with him for several years until his death. Later, the northern winters being too severe, he went to Delaware. His wife was living there as recently as 1920. A picture of his daughter, in her youth, called forth from her cousin the following: "Mary Louisa was just as sweet as she looks, a devoted Christian. She was our first Sunday School teacher, and we loved her very much. She inherited the red hair of Mary Pearce Salisbury, but had blue eyes. Grandmother's eyes were brown, some of her boys had red hair, Hamilton and Lucius. I had a lock of hair which was cut from the head of Hamilton. It has lain wrapped in paper for years and years, but is still bright and shiny.

SALISBURY GENEALOGY

"I do not know much about the Calvin Salisbury home, as our people moved to Western New York when I was a baby, but Mother used to tell us a great deal about it, especially the brook. I remember Grandpa very well, seeing him in his rocking chair by the window or walking about the stoop with his cane. I remember the funeral and how he was taken to Herkimer County for burial."

She also speaks of Mr. West's sister: "Libby, we used to call her, was a very lovely girl. Uncle Richard's girls and I always thought she had no equal anywhere."

Lucius was a doctor and practiced in Mohawk.

Richard, the last surviving of the family, spent his last years with his daughter, Mrs. Waring, who writes of his recollections: "He remembered his mother's loneliness when the oldest child, Philena, was married and went to live near Buffalo, as that was practically as distant as California is now. His sister Nancy was quoted as saying that after the death of the youngest, little Mary, the thought of that child was with their mother every minute for a year. A very vivid recollection of his childhood was of the two (or three) maiden aunts, for whom his father had fixed one part of the house. They lived there for years, and it was his duty to help wait on them, carry wood, water, etc.

"I would like to speak of my father as a very kind, tender hearted man, one who put duty ahead of wealth or happiness."
